

Bookkeeping Without Staff

A new business service was launched recently by GBD, a group of independent retailers all with supermarkets under their control throughout the State. This group of successful operators have been in the industry for many years and this collaboration has been the catalyst behind the new venture.

The need to develop an in-house approach to book keeping for this group was obvious as this made economic sense in compared to duplicating the function of having a book keeper in every store.

The service offered by JV is basically a no hassles book keeper that manages the day to day tasks associated with the proper running of supermarkets, without the trouble and expense of hiring individual staff at every store, hence it is also a cost saving measure.

The process is fairly simple and can be applied to any retail business no matter where they are, as all paperwork is simply express posted in and JV completes the data entry and processing, providing reports and bill payment summaries in a timely manner.

Quite simply, the service does a better job, is disciplined and refined constantly and takes the burden of responsibility from the retailer's shoulder, especially relevant with ever changing rules and regulations today.

The service is designed to fit nicely between the business and an accountant, the information will be available more quickly than ever before, in a professional manner without any effort by the retailer and provide the accountant a far clearer picture of the business performance.
