

New FoodWorks for Tooradin

The long-awaited arrival of the town's first supermarket was greeted with much delight. The store was scheduled to open pre-christmas but due to planning problems with the build it was delayed over three months.

Tooradin is a small township on the South Gippsland Highway at the top of Westernport Bay about an hour from Melbourne and until last month had never had its own supermarket, with locals having to travel to Cranbourne for their daily shopping.

Set up by Liam Keating and his team from the Keatson group of three stores, the new 7000 sq ft store is an impressive sight on the highway with brightly coloured signage facing onto the service road car park.

The modern store internals were designed by TRG and dressed in the familiar new FoodWorks livery delivering a bright and friendly shop.

Boasting a large liquor section complete with smart, modern designed racking and checkouts from IDM Intec Design & Manufacturing the store is quite a showpiece.
